

To find out who your city council member is, google your city or town's "name" and "council members". Each municipality's website will look different.

Below are some examples of how to search for and find your city councillors:

If you live in London, you can type in "London city council members". The first page that pops up is titled "City Council | City of London". Click the link and then "Ward Map" and you will be able to view each ward and the councillor for that ward will be listed. On the previous page you can click "Learn More" to find your ward councillor's email address, which is where you will send the letter requesting that your municipality declare IPV an epidemic.

If you live in Brantford, you can type in "Brantford city council members". The first page that pops up is titled "City Council – City of Brantford". On this page, the ward map can be found by clicking "five wards". Below the sentence that says, "five wards", you can see a list of "Brantford Ward Councillors". Councillors' names and email addresses are listed within the ward they are representing.

If you live in Hamilton, you can type in "Hamilton city councillors". The first page that comes up is titled "City Council Members | City of Hamilton. Click on this page and then "City Councillors". All Hamilton City Councillors will appear. If you click on a ward (ex. Ward 1) you can view the ward profile which is a map of the ward by clicking on the blue box titled "View Ward 1 Profile". Below that blue box, you will find the councillors' information, including their email addresses.

If you live in Toronto, you can type in "Toronto city councillors". The first page that comes up is titled "Members of Council – City of Toronto". Click on this page. Under "Find Your Councillor" type in your address and click "Lookup Address". The map below will show you your ward. Click on your highlighted ward and your city council members name will appear. Click on their name and you will find their contact information to the left of the page, including their email address.

Once you have found your city councillor's email address, you can address the fillable IPV letter template to them, add your name, sign at the end and email it to your council representative.
